

Perspectives 2040 - Greene County Future Land Use Plan Update

Strong and Weak Places Exercise Results

This is what the Steering Committee thought, what are your ideas? Take a map and tell us what you think.

Greene County is full of diverse places. Some places are viewed as having positive impacts on their communities, others may not. Where are these places located within Greene County?

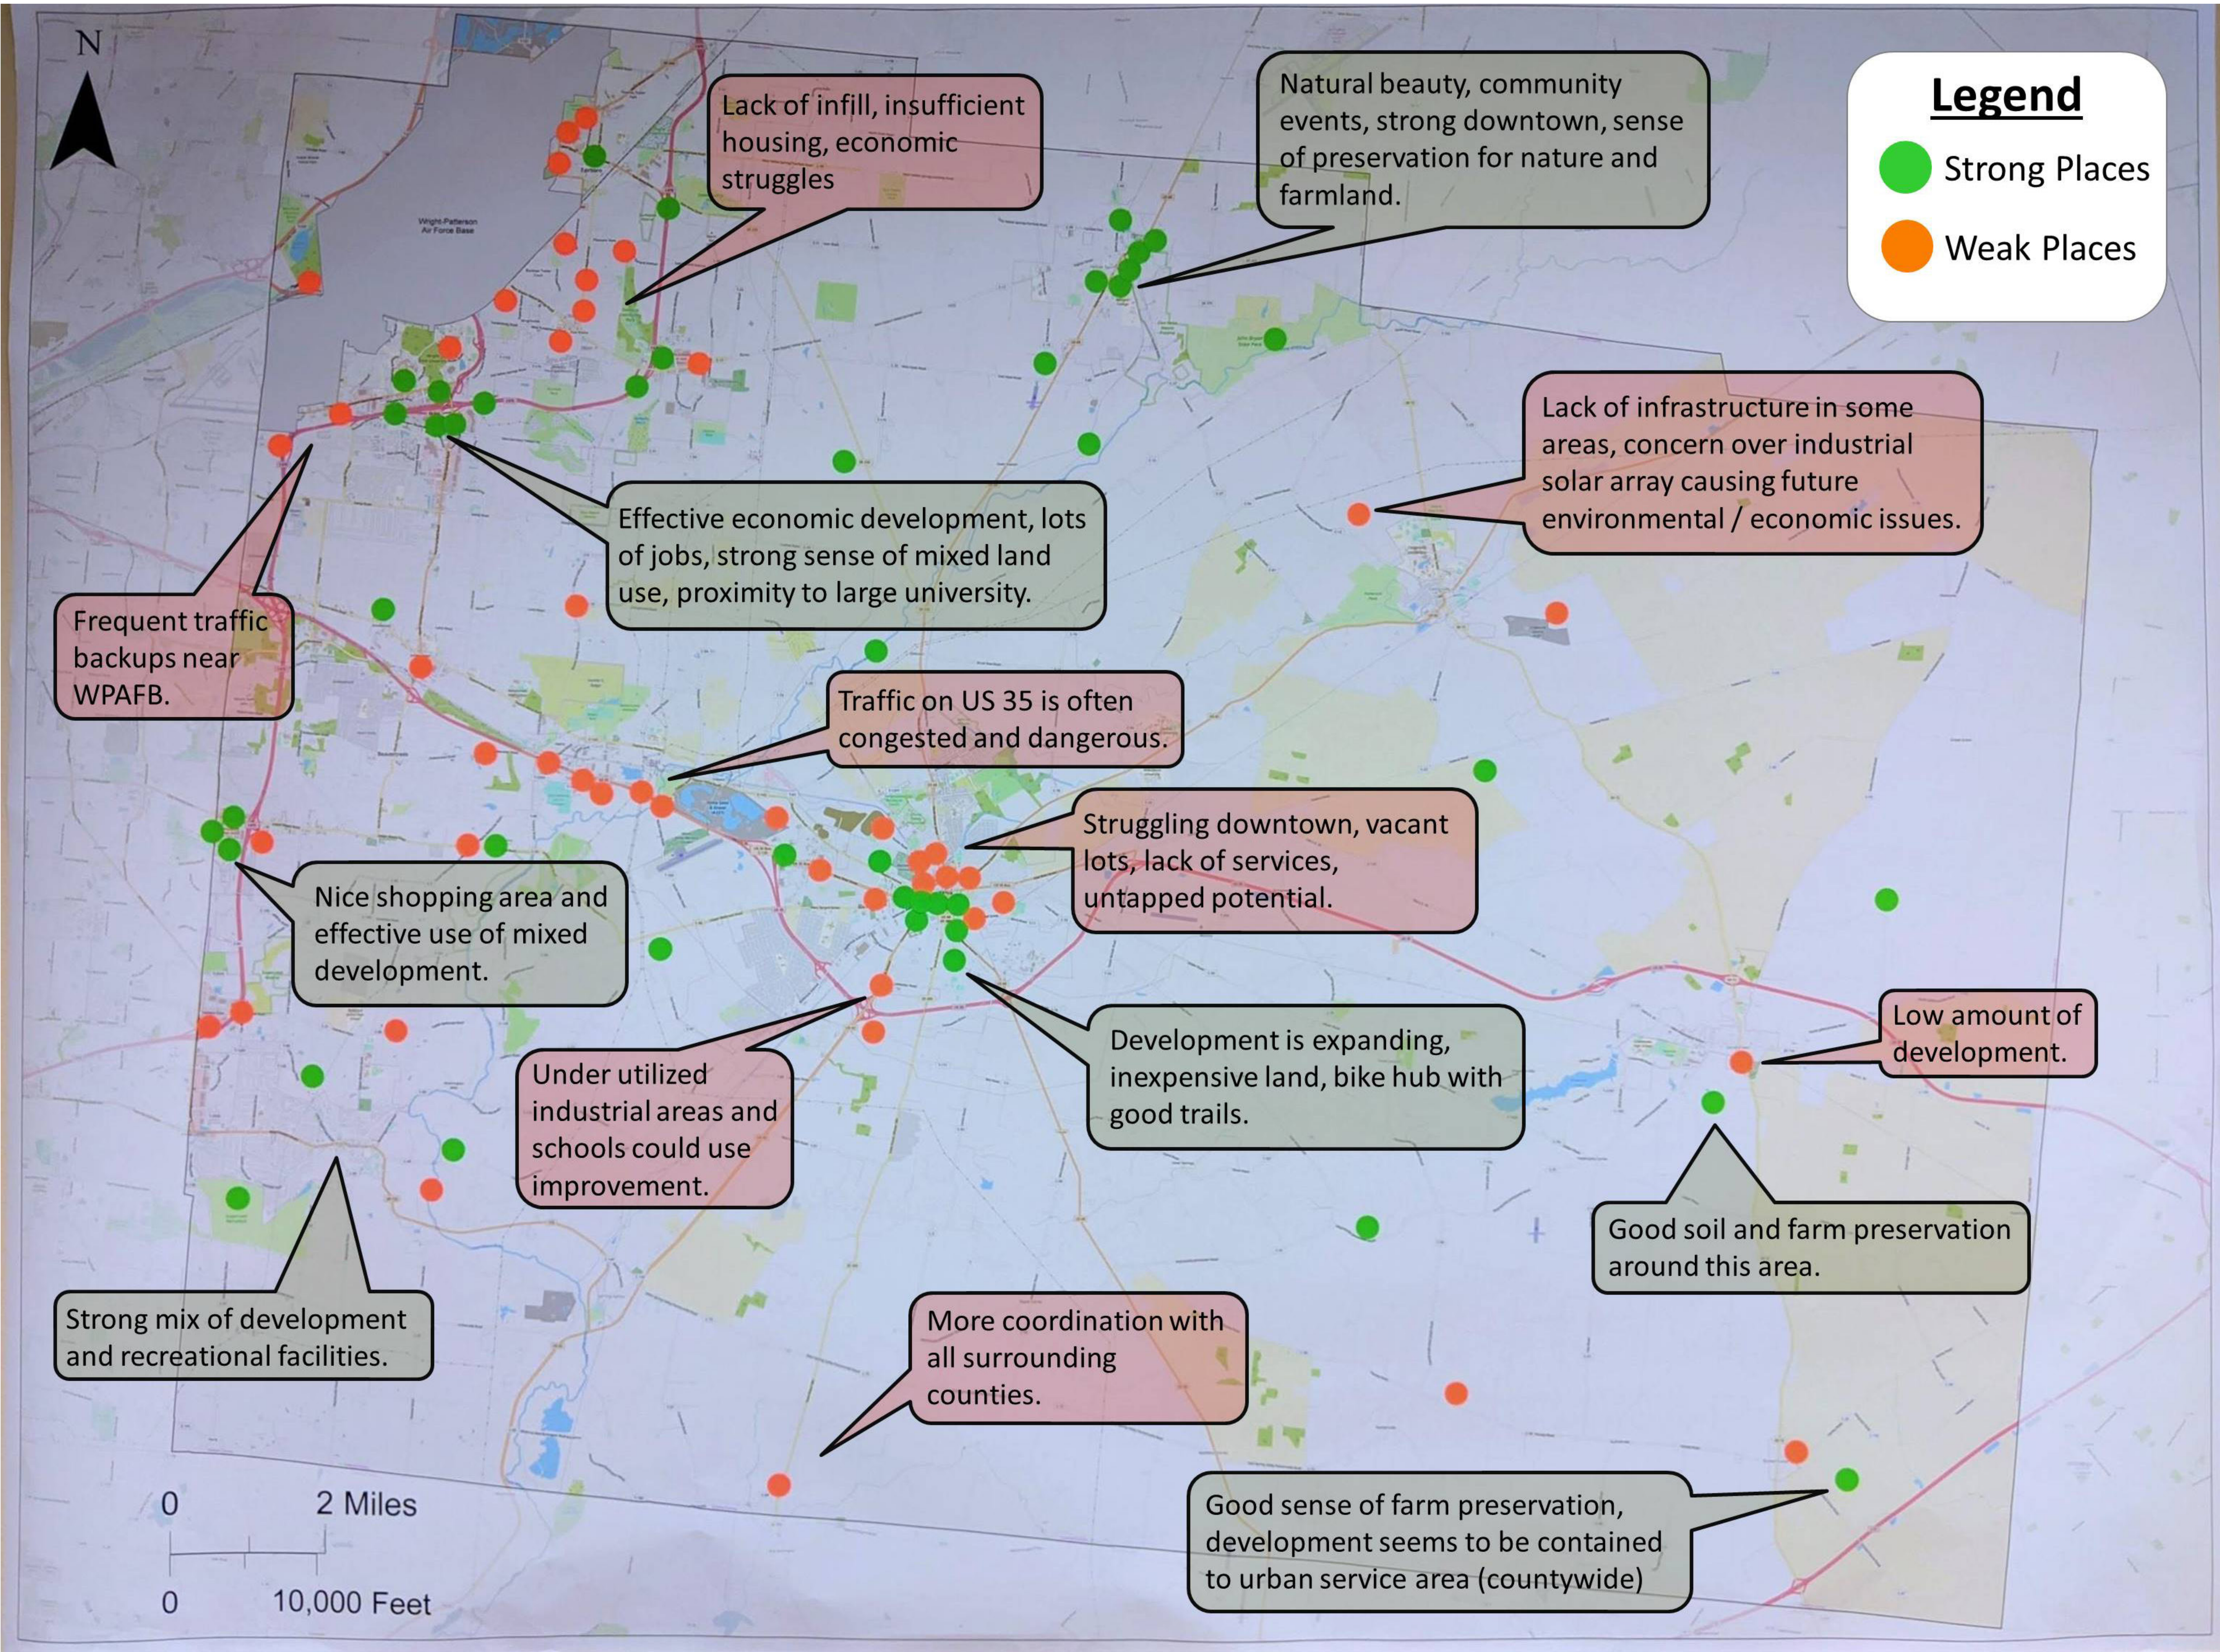

In order to answer that question, we presented the Steering Committee with a map. We had them place green dots to represent a strong location, and orange dots to represent weak locations. This map shows the results from the exercise. The comments are examples of comments received from the Steering Committee about the locations.

Steering Committee members participating in the strong and weak places exercise.

Patterns Emerge

After careful analysis of the Steering Committee's strong / weak place choices, several patterns emerged. There was universal praise for parts of Greene County, such as Yellow Springs and the county's farmland. Other areas received mixed reviews, such as the Wright State area and parts of Xenia. Lastly, some locations were heavily marked as weak, such as the US 35 corridor and parts of Fairborn. It is crucial to identify these locations in order to understand the status of Greene County today and where the opportunities may be in the future.

Strong and weak locations in Greene County as identified by the Steering Committee

